

CLINICALLY WEALTHY

By: Robert Dale Franklin

LogLine.

A middle-aged artist who's convinced he's wealthy struggles to fabricate a lifestyle of privilege, while eluding a police officer friend who demands he see a psychiatrist.

SYNOPSIS

MARCO FRANKLIN lives a life of fantastical proportions. He signs his name on just about anything. Marco goes out of his way to inform people of his name in hopes of them being elated by his presence.

Marco's longtime friend PHIL, a police officer, constantly labors in getting Marco to a doctor for treatment he feels Marco desperately needs.

Marco's aunt passes on and wills him money. He now sets out to design his ultimate dream. Phil is never far away and manages to check in on Marco's mischievous behaviors.

Marco has challenges with multiple women who seem to want him for only one reason. This prompts him to make a deal with Phil, which leads Marco to a doctor.

Marco buys a house and renovates it, then throws an elaborate party for all to enjoy.

An uninvited movie-star neighbor attends the party and helps Marco back to reality, and restores Marco's friendship with Phil, while exposing the selfish motives of JEYA.
